“Gross, a spider!” Gross? Really? Take a closer look. Spiders are actually fascinating and have very special abilities. In this lovingly illustrated nonfiction picture book, children can observe how a garden spider spins her artful web, how she goes hunting, mates, and lays eggs- and how, finally, the tiny spider babies hatch and are taken by the wind on a long journey. The foldout pages hide even more interesting information about the garden spider and its eight-legged relatives: how can you tell the difference between males and females? What is a spider web actually made of? The book includes a discoverer’s journal that invites young readers to do their own spider research.
