

Wild, Colourful, Rebellious!

Leipzig, 1936. On the first day of the summer holidays, 16-year-old Harro gets into a fight with members of the Hitler Youth. He unexpectedly gets help from like-minded people who, like him, want nothing to do with the Nazi ideology. In the year that follows, everything changes for Harro. Conflicts with his parents and trouble at school, nights at campfires, political action, first love – and above all, the fear that his wild activities might have dangerous consequences.

Nominated for the German Youth Literature Award 2018 - selected by the youth jury!

The "Leipzig Meuten", a group of oppositional youth gangs, inspired Johannes Herwig's debut. His discussion of growing up in a dictatorship is powerful, thrilling, and emotional. The questions he poses are as applicable now as they were then: should one participate, should one quietly adjust, or should one resist?
