»Don't go to the fair! And watch out for pickpockets!« That is the warning that master tailor Antonius Lautensack gives to his children Lukas and Anna. They're on their way to the cloth merchant Brandis to pick up some new velvet, and they're carrying a sack of coins to pay for it. But the moment they catch sight of the fire-breather and the onlookers in the bustling marketplace, they forget all about their father's advice. As they push their way through the crowd, Lukas gets bumped and jostled this way and that, and when they finally arrive at the cloth merchant's shop, the coin purse is gone! Now it's up to the market master to help!

With richly colorful illustrations and a glossary of terms. Developed in collaboration with the Museum of the City of Hildesheim, Germany. Historical advisor: Dr. Stefan Bölke, Curator of Art and Regional History of the City Museum, Roemer-Pelizaeus Museum Hildesheim.
