This year will be different, Paul's mother declares: we're going to have a quiet Christmas without the relatives! Grandma is appalled, and Paul's little sister Frida is furious. As if that weren't enough, Frida's teacher says there's no Santa! Paul can't bear to see Frida disappointed – he's determined to prove that there really is a Santa.

On top of that, somehow he's got to pull his family together and make sure they have a real Christmas. But that's easier said than done . . .

Funny, spirited and original, here's a Christmas story for reading – and reading aloud – for the whole family.
