In this small, thick colour book, Sabine Lohf has created 50 imaginative pictures that introduce children to the world of colours in a playful way. Be it a frog-green frog king or a feather-white chick, a little ship in a sea-blue sea or a chalk-white snowman - every page holds a new surprise. What other colours might there be? And maybe big and small people will paint their own colourful pictures to go with them?

This visual school, which at the same time promotes language, is fun for even the youngest children and opens up the colourful world to them. And it encourages painting and crafting!

Recommended as a visual school and for language development.
